Fund managers comments

During the month of September the fund decreased with 1,19%. This compared with the MSCI World down 1,80%, a Eurostoxx600 down 1,48% and an IBOXX index up 0,32%. The current net exposure in equities increased slightly to 45,8% and the currency exposure was 61% in Euro and 24% in USD.

For a few weeks now, three uncertainties have once again gripped investors, and as long as these uncertainties remain unresolved, investors are holding back the pause button for the time being. First of all, the sharp increase in covid-19 contaminants in Europe and the US has once again fuelled fears of renewed lockdown measures that risk undermining a sustainable recovery in world trade. In addition, the presidential election campaign in the US is also creating uncertainty. The fact that D. Trump refuses to guarantee a peaceful transfer of power, as well as the fact that the electoral rules on postal ballots in the crucial swing states are still being rewritten every day under pressure from Republican lawyers, make Wall Street nervous. A third uncertainty stems from the halt in negotiations between Republicans and Democrats on a major new stimulus package. As a result, it will not be possible to approve an agreement before the elections and therefore at the earliest early next year, which is detrimental to the recovery of the U.S. economy.

Despite these uncertainties, we would almost forget that Jerome Powel, President of the FED, surprised the financial markets with a very exceptional measure. He confirmed that the FED will maintain its interest rates at 0% until at least 2023, even if average inflation should rise to 2%. Christine Lagarde, as President of the ECB, has also recently indicated that she foresees an additional stimulus by the end of the year.

As a result of this very broad monetary policy on the part of the FED and the ECB, money has now become virtually free, making equities even more attractive as an investment to generate returns in the future. We mainly focus our selection on high-quality shares that strike a good balance between growth potential and reliable income. Therefore, despite the current nervousness, we believe that the markets are more likely to stop at this point in time and that falling prices will bring opportunities once new stimulus packages are announced.
