Fund managers comments

During the month of September the fund increased with 2,31%. This compared with the MSCI World down 2,52%, a Eurostoxx 600 down 3,51% and an IBOXX index down 0,7%. The current net exposure in equities increased to 59,5% and the currency exposure was 50% in Euro and 31% in USD. After a relatively quiet summer in the financial markets, nervousness slowly increased in September. Both rising long-term interest rates and some internal events in China caused unease among investors. The global economy has recovered significantly in recent months after the severe impact of the COVID pandemic. The reopenings and tailwinds from hugely expansionary monetary and fiscal policies have brought economic output in Europe back to pre-crisis levels, and in the US already well above. Now that the lockdown measures have largely been abandoned, the demand for goods is rising so sharply that there is currently a massive shortage of container ships. This logistical nightmare as well as the sharp increases in energy prices have fuelled inflation figures since the summer. The coming months will show whether these increasing inflationary effects are temporary or structural. Against this tense market environment, central banks are preparing for a gradual withdrawal of ultra-expansive support measures. At its last meeting, the Fed reacted to the significant progress in the US. labor market, with Federal Reserve Jerome Powell promising a reduction in bond purchases, known as "tapering," by the end of this year. As a result, the 10-year U.S. government bond yield rose from 1,17% to 1,59%. Investors were also concerned about the severe financial problems of the Chinese real estate group Evergrande. In addition, the tightening of regulations on large Chinese tech companies also played a negative role on investment sentiment. Through tighter regulation, the Chinese regime is trying to strengthen its grip on the economy and to safeguard national security and social peace. Beijing's priority is clear: common prosperity takes precedence over very rapid growth. In our view, the policy of financial repression by central banks is far from over. Long-term interest rates may rise slightly but real interest rates (i.e. adjusted for inflation) remain negative. Given that no official rate hikes are expected in the US before 2023, the negative real interest rate will maintain the appeal of equities even after the expected tapering. In other words : the TINA argument ("there is no alternative") remains valid. In
