Fund managers comments

During the month of March the fund increased with 1,49%. This compared with the MSCI World up 3,95%, a Eurostoxx 600 slightly up 0,61% and an IBOXX index down 1,31%. The current net exposure in equities decreased to 57,6% and the currency exposure was 49,1,9% in Euro and 38,6% in USD.

For weeks all attention has been focused on the Russian invasion of Ukraine. While the war and the human suffering continue and people continue to put pressure on Russia through Western sanctions, investors are turning their attention to the economic consequences of this war. Global economic growth will inevitably slow as a result but a global recession seems unlikely to us at present. Concerns focus on the current fragility of the European economy. A stagflation scenario is still avoidable as long as necessary gas deliveries from Russia to Europe can continue. In contrast, U.S. economic growth remains very robust.

The sharp rise in energy prices, the prolonged supply chain disruption, and the labor shortage had already pushed global inflation statistics to levels not seen in decades before the invasion of Ukraine. The Russian invasion of Ukraine only accelerated the inflation rates. In the United States, inflation rose to 7,9% in February. In the Eurozone, inflation continues to rise to a record 7,5%.

In line with expectations, the Fed raised interest rates by 0,25% in March for the first time since 2018. Moreover, the US central bank announced 6 more interest rate hikes for this year, indicating that the policy rate will be around 2% by the end of 2022. The ECB faces the same problem : it too needs to tighten its monetary policy to control rising inflation rates while trying to maintain economic growth. The increasing pressure on the ECB makes it realistic that it too will raise its interest rate before the end of 2022.

Meanwhile, real interest rates (interest net of inflation) continue to go more into negative territory. The best solution to counter this loss of purchasing power is to invest in real assets such as equities and gold. Given that geopolitical uncertainty will persist for quite some time, the importance of risk management and diversification cannot be overstated at present. Hence, our main focus is to navigate our Hotep global Flexible fund as well as possible through this geopolitical and inflationary storm while remaining flexible enough to surf along once equity markets regain their momentum.
